ART IS EVERYWHERE, EVEN IN ART GALLERIES.
Dialogos part three
Galerie Caesar / Vitrína Deniska, Olomouc, CZ, 2017.

A year before the opening, a group of artists starts to publish texts and images on a shared online document. Following this dialogue, the show displays interweaving contributions by the same artists.

Inattività come verità effettiva dell'uomo
Sala delle Colonne, Corbetta, IT, 2016. Found paintings, oil on canvas, frames, and the activity of Filippo Falaguasta.

"Laziness as the Truth of Mankind" is the title of a not so much known essay by Kazimir Malevic (1921) which was used on the occasion of my solo show in a small town near Milano.

In the first room some found, commercial paintings were "refurbished" and their frames used as if they were sculptures, leant against the wall. The red squares were painted with oil color at the center spot of each piece.

In the second room, the activity was delegated to another artist, in a deliberate act of "non-doing".

Note: these paintings were made by another artist.
Welcome!
La Rada, Locarno, CH, 2016.

A group show in Switzerland dealing with the idea of migrants and migrations. Here a selection of the works.

Above: Farsi Lazy, in collaboration with Shervin Kianersi. Digital print. The results of a daily email correspondence about laziness, written with Italian and Iranian words.

Left: Morton St. NYC, illegal copy of the key of a New York apartment, hanging on the ceiling.
Welcome!

Falso trattato di estetica (quadrato rosa)
Caffè Internazionale, Palermo, IT, 2016.
Found objects, plants, oil on papers, and the remains of the previous exhibition.

In my solo show in Palermo I exhibited a series of objects found in a bar and some oil paintings on pages taken from old books. Those objects were “falsified”, following the definition of the recent rediscovered treatise by Benjamin Fondane (False Treatise of Esthetics, 1938) that gives the exhibition its title.

Note: including some references to Broodthaers, Nannucci, Alberto Sordi, the Palermo football team, and an imaginary blue Coke.

Uno specchio per cinque
(A mirror for five)

In the crypt of Cabaret Voltaire, a set will be built with the aim of shooting the first scene of a film. In this scene five non-professional actors will be invited to enact the personal obsessions of the five of us, who will take the role of directors. The audience will be very close to the action and, at times, inevitably become part of it. Through this film, we will be confronted with our own selves, our mirrored images, and our contradictions.

Note: I wrote a story about this photo, see artseverywhere.ca
A new series of paintings – made by using raw materials from the 80s – all dealing with a portrait of the young, beardless Marx. Accumulations, erasures, overlaps; the paintings are made one on the other, or deleted, blotted out, and then – in this case – exhibited as if they were sculptures.

Kunsthalle novi
Novi Ligure, IT, 2015
An artist-run space, 100x17x10 cm

An empty museum. A museum full of works that can be stolen. A museum as precarious as an errant boulder, which isn’t where it should be, or in place without a reason.

Kunsthalle novi is a "museum" inspired by the great twentieth-century tradition of "canned museums" or portable museums, derived from Duchamp. It is, to be more precise, an "artist-run space" currently located in a small niche on the external wall of the Town Hall in Novi Ligure, but that could be in the future relocated elsewhere in the city. It has its own wall-plate.

I founded Kunsthalle novi on Oct 10th, 2015 on the occasion of my participation at Materia, a group show curated by Massimo Palazzi.

Negozio (Shop)
Nowhere Gallery, Milan, IT, 2014.
Writing on lightbox, 100x200 cm

After an invitation to realize a work on the gallery lightbox, I decided to use that space to make more clear the role of both the art galleries and the artists: “Negozio” – the Italian word for “shop” – is for galleries (and it's etymologically the negation of ozio/otium/leisure). Then, “Ozio” is for artists.
Besides, it's always the others who die
By Emilio Fantin, Luigi Negro, Giancarlo Norese, Cesare Pietroiusti, Luigi Presicce (eds.)

This book, whose title is the epitaph on Marcel Duchamp's tombstone, is one of several initiatives that we have developed around the theme of death, starting from "The Celebration of the Living (who reflect upon death)."

The Celebration of the Living (who reflect upon death), 4th ed.

A collaborative art project I developed together with Emilio Fantin, Luigi Negro, and Cesare Pietroiusti in the form of a public procession in downtown Phoenix, including other artists and performers. In Phoenix we decided to use a car with no engine, as an equivalent of boat for surviving in the desert, to be pushed by ourselves and the public.

In similar tradition to “Day of the Dead”, “The Celebration of the Living”, or “La Festa dei vivi” in Italian, is for those who, in order to give sense to life, reflect upon death.

With the contribution of The Bad Cactus Brass Band, Deborah Boardman, Kristina Lee Podesva, Merced Maldonado, Julio Cesar Morales, Marie Navarre, Alessandra Pomarico, Shawn Van Sluys, Gregory Sale, Elisabeth Johnson, and students from the Arizona State University.
Note: the red shroud, where people wrote dedications to their dear ones who passed away.
Unsichtbar machen (my attempt at making lemon juice writings visible on the wall)

Curated by Alessandro Castiglioni and Ermanno Cristini.
Lemon juice, brush, lighter, white wall, invisible writings.

An exhibition in Bucharest dealing with the concept of archives.
I wrote a list of names of my ex girlfriends with lemon juice, that is known to be used as an “invisible ink” by children.
I wanted to keep these names secret; anyway I gave them a chance to become public by heating the writings with a lighter.
Mission not accomplished.
Playground
CRAC, Liceo Artistico Munari, Cremona, IT, 2013.
Curated by Dino Ferruzzi; in collaboration with Filippo Falaguasta.
Frames from a video clip including four hundred students and some teachers

I wanted to make a series of video group portraits, allowing the students to use their school space through a different vision. With the kind support of some of the teachers, I shot a series of living postcards where the students usually stand still, while the professors were working. According to the classes, the portraits were interpreted in a different way.
Tenkalaut

Traduction, tradition, trahison,
Le Cube, Rabat, MA, 2013.
Curated by Maria Iñigo Clavo
and Anna Raimondo.
Artists’ book, performance

In 2005 I published a book with Cesare Pietroiusti, produced by the Swiss Institute in Rome, titled “Tenkalaut. Seven dialogues between G.N. and C.P.”, written after a transcription of seven real dialogues made in seven, different fictional languages.

Some years later, I was invited to arrange a performance on the occasion of a group show in Morocco on the theme of “translation”. I asked the people attending the performance to make an attempt to render the dialogues real again, by making a public lecture of the dialogues. We discovered that many of our invented words were very similar to some rare Berber dialects.
Strong Electricity Room

Urban Play, Landgent Center, Beijing, CN, 2011.
Curated by Tang Zehui.
Modified door, ambient size; installation view.

I asked the owners of the Landgent Center, a shopping mall in Beijing, to be provided with the keys of the "Strong Electricity Room". Then I instructed a locksmith to add many locks on the entrance door of that room. I wanted to make stronger the idea that unauthorized people were not allowed to access that place.
Francesche
Dialogos, Assab One, Milan, IT, 2011.
Curated by Alessandro Castiglioni.
Private performance with cell phone.

I decided to make phone calls to every Francesca I knew at the time. Most of my ex partners have that name. It was embarrassing to talk to some of them so much time later.
At my solo show, instead of exhibiting something, I gave a public lecture on the most significant failures in my career as an artist.
Making a Whole
Public art project in Crotta d'Adda near Cremona, IT, 2008

A fresco made of two half hearts that could be completed only from the right point of view.

Born in Novi Ligure, Italy, and currently based in Milano. My work has been exhibited in one-artist and group shows in such venues as Villa Medicis/Académie de France (Rome), Neon (Bologna), the 42nd and 48th Venice Biennale, P.S.1 at the Clocktower Gallery (New York), Galerija Škuc (Ljubljana), Continua (San Gimignano), Fondazione Pistoletto (Biella), Viafarini (Milano), Performa07 at the Sculpture Center (New York), Tent (Rotterdam), MAMM (Moscow), and the And And And events to dOCUMENTA (13).

I was one of the initiators and the editor of the books for Progetto Oreste (1997–2001), a network of international artists and curators. My publications include books published by Galleria Massimo De Carlo, Charta, Istituto Svizzero di Roma, La Rada, Kunsthalle Marcel Duchamp, Verlag für Moderne Kunst, Sputnik Editions, as well as contributions to artists books and magazines.

I was also an associate artist at the Atlantic Center for the Arts c/o Civitella Ranieri; a resident artist at Red Gate (Beijing, 2011) and at the ASU Art Museum (Arizona, 2012-2013); I was awarded first prize at the Premio Terna in 2010, the 47th Premio Suzzara in 2011 and the Premio NCTM e l’Arte in 2012.

I have been involved in many collaborative projects including experimental education (Free Home University), artists’ books (a certain number of books.), plural actions (Lu Cafausu), artist-run spaces (Kunsthalle novi), and the setting up of a foundation (Lac o Le Mon).
